PERSONNEL DECISIONS INTERNATIONAL OPENS OFFICE IN THE HAGUE

THE HAGUE, THE NETHERLANDS (Mar. 31, 2008) – Personnel Decisions International (PDI), a global consulting firm specializing in talent management and leadership development, recently completed its move to a new office in the center of The Hague. The office will continue to support Shell work, and in the near future, will provide the full services of PDI and cater to the expanding customer base in the region.

During the past 5 years, PDI The Hague has been housed in a Regus office. With PDI's growing list of customers and growing consulting staff, a new regional office was needed to support current and expected growth.

“As the team grew, we needed more space,” said Jan Van der Pas, deputy managing director for the Netherlands. “Our new office is a benefit to us and to our customers.”

“We have mainly served our clients in the Netherlands out of our Brussels office. We established ourselves in a new location to be closer to them and to host the growing number of PDI consultants in the Netherlands,” said Klaus Schuler, senior vice president of PDI's European, Middle East, and African region.

“PDI is committed to providing world-class service on a global scale with the personalized service of a local presence,” Schuler continued. “This new office will help us facilitate that goal.”
